Dear Sirs:

Why doesn't the DOJ quit tormenting Microsoft and move on. The states are claiming that the consumer was 'short-changed' by Microsoft. It seems to me that if the consumer didn't like the Windows OS, they could vote with their feet. You can't make someone buy what they don't want to buy. This is all triggered by whining competitors who can't make the grade on their two feet.

I should think the fact that Microsoft is maintaining its workforce when layoffs in all sectors are a problem would be reason enough to support their success rather than try to stifle it.

Shame on the whiners!! Please stand up for one of our great American Companies - MICROSOFT!!
